The 2005 World Music Awards

The Susan Thompson Show will be covering The 2005 World Music Awards. Arrangements are already on their way and interviews are being scheduled for the show. The first show takes place in Hollywood.

Mariah Carey & Destiny's Child will perform at the World Music Awards, which will take place at the prestigious Kodak Theatre in Hollywood, California on Wednesday, August 31, and be broadcast, in Fall 2005, Prime Time on the Skyline Television Network.

Also slated to perform and receive awards are supergroup Bon Jovi and legendary guitarist Carlos Santana.

The World Music Awards are the most televised of all music awards shows. The show is televised in 160 countries, reaching more than a billion viewers worldwide.

Established in 1989, the World Music Awards is the only awards show that honors the bestselling recording artists from every major country around the world. The Awards are given out for record sales only. Sales figures which determine winners are supplied and certified by the IFPI (International Federation of the Phonography Industry), with no voting audience and no voting jury involved. Winners are determined by the record-buying public.

The 2005 World Music Awards is a Marcov International Production. Executive producers are Melissa Corken, John Martinotti and Gary Pudney.

The Susan Thompson Show will air the first show as a Special on Skyline Television Network reaching 120 million viewers in Oct. 2005. Look out for it.
